The Andes Edition

Welcome to our wine list brimming with splendid wines to be backed up by our personal service.

We have many long standing arrangements with wine growers around the world and they continue to make great wines in sometimes challenging conditions, particularly global warming which is producing earlier and earlier harvests and also stressing the vines. But all sent to try them as they say, but don't say I said so!

The wines from Cremele Recas in Romania are quite amazing for their quality and value, really well made wines in this vast winery mostly owned by a couple Philip and Elvira Cox, we have just added few new ones in this list.

The wine region offering great value these days in Bordeaux, revisit to see the amazing red wine you can buy for fair prices, coming up on the rails are white wines that is the big revolution in Bordeaux, wines at all levels and prices.

The rosé wines of the world continue to grow in popularity, even if it is with a clink of ice in them, lots to choose from and not just the south of France.

Looking forward to hearing your choices and if you need any help, let us know, we offer personal service to go with these splendid wines!

With all the best wishes

Andrew J. Firth

What's Happening in Wine and Restaurants?

Tasting menu wines - With the popularity of tasting menus comes the matching wines with food and thus matching a wine to each course. The plus side is that people get to try unusual wines from less regular regions, down side often the classics are forgotten. (AF)

Wine with ice - Keeping it nice and cool on a hot day? Or a way to make that one glass last a little longer when you are driving? Both seem fair and reasonable - but it is still diluting the winemakers carefully crafted wine. A good rule of thumb: Pinot, 'Sauvignon' and Rosé - go for it; Meursault and Puligny - don't you dare! (WT)

Half bottles - Very different to the increasing by the glass offering. Your own bottle to share or if dining alone - ranging from House Claret to Puligny-Montrachet and Champagne, for when a bottle is a little too much. Good on-trend producers are adding to their ranges. (WT)

Cooler reds - Lighter and juicer reds have been growing in popularity for a few years now, particularly with people looking for a little lower alcohol. These wines really benefit from being a touch cooler - 15°C is perfect. (WT)

Wine preservation - Gone are the days of a bottle, cork left out behind a hot bar. Verre du Vin, Coravin, Vac-u-vin all do a similar job, and don't be scared of storing reds in the fridge overnight - it slows down oxidation - just remember to get them out before service! (WT)

Organic and biodynamic - Good winemaking and vineyard practice surely? The top producers have been working this way for years, but don't shout about it. But does being organic and or biodynamic make the wine good - not necessarily? But at least the vineyards are being protected for the future. (WT)

People wearing baseball hats inside - Why? Should put a sign up in restaurants and shops, "Oi! Take your hat off". (AF)

Allegens and preferences - It's a massive issue to both the restaurateur and also the chef, it is something that has to be taken very seriously as it can be life threatening if not adhered to for certain allergies. But and a big but here, if it's just a preference then causes the same hassles for a kitchen ensuring no trace of whatever are in the food. Are all really necessary? (AF)

Ozempic - In Yorkshire hostellers used to pride themselves on their generous portions and eat all you can buffets, often not needed now with the rise of Ozempic drugs, appetites are suppressed and portions can be reduced, sadly I think it affects wine consumption as well. But is a great thing for the nation's health. (AF)

Reservations and no shows - I hear it is not as big an issue as it was 12 months or so ago, maybe the taking of credit card deposits has put the brakes on somewhat. But it is still an issue. I wonder if walk-ins are less common in this book or society? (AF)

Dogs in restaurants - When I was a child the only dogs in restaurants were guide dogs, now it's a norm, "Let's go out for lunch and let other diners stroke our wonderful fluffy dog and hopefully he/she can have a snap at another dog". (AF)

Wine glasses - The experience of drinking wine from a quality produced and appropriate for the style of wine enhances the experience exponentially and is well worth the investment, yes glasses do get broken but it adds to the customer experience and satisfaction. (AF)

What's Happening in Wine and Restaurants?

Wine glasses - The experience of drinking wine from a quality produced and appropriate for the style of wine enhances the experience exponentially and is well worth the investment, yes glasses do get broken but it adds to the customer experience and satisfaction. (AF)

Cutting the foil and serving - We have a new trend with opening bottles, the yankers, they yank the foil off and then open the bottle, the lovely decorative sometimes branded foil is just an inconvenience to getting at the cork for the yankers. The foil should be neatly cut below the lip and then the cork removed. Don't be a yanker! (AF)

Zero alcohol wines - See how far beer has come - wine is on the same journey. How much the consumer is willing to pay vs. how the wine currently tastes is the stopping point for now. The good ones are ok, the bad are terrible. (WT)

Wine prices - Prices have gone up with everything, it's just how it is. But £3 a bottle (before any VAT on selling price) seem steep compared to about €0.03 en France. Go to Spain and house wine is perfectly good at €5 a bottle. Why do we pay more here? Tax, shipping, staff costs.... Places that look at the cash margin on a bottle, genuinely sell better wine and more of it. £5 extra for the Chablis - it's a yes from me. (WT)

What size should a glass of wine be - This is both a measure and the goblet itself. 250ml swamps some glasses but equally a 125ml in an oversized glass meant for a bold red barely wets the sides. 250ml of white on a hot day soon gets warm - two 125ml would show the wine at its best. A large red probably doesn't give it a chance to really open up in the glass either. My advice - buy a bottle and top up as required, never beyond half way though! (WT)

Vineyard at Chapel Down, Kent

White Burgundy

The home of the Chardonnay grape, and this is where Chardonnay shows at its absolute best. Often developed with the careful use of oak to develop the aromas and flavours as well as to add longevity to some of the great wines. Great Chardonnay and great White Burgundy should never be dominated by the oaky flavours that spoilt so many New World imitators in years gone by.

Domaine de la Chapelle, Solutre-Pouilly

The Mâconnais in the south of Burgundy produces a fruitier, more modern style of wine. Domaine de la Chapelle, where Pascal Rollet and his wife Catherine, and son, Thomas manage the small estate, was first tasted by Andrew in Copenhagen. Grown at the foot of the "Rock of Solutré". Quite some White Burgundy at this price.

Domaine de Vauroux, Chablis

The history of the Domains de Vauroux is intertwined with the rebirth of the Chablis winegrowing region, undertaken in the 1970s. Olivier Tricon's father, Jean-Pierre and his uncle, Claude, planted their first vines in 1972. They subsequently acquired multiple plots, eventually creating an estate of 13 hectares in one contiguous area. From then on, the family farm, located on the hills of Chablis, was almost exclusively dedicated to working the vines.

Red Burgundy & Rhône

A straight run down the autoroute from Dijon to Avignon via Lyon runs through these famous vineyards. Different grapes; Pinot Noir, Gamay, Grenache, Syrah but a similar feel for red wine production affected by the warmer weather as you head south. This is the main artery of French food and wine, a total delight.

Red Burgundy

Domaine du Clos des Poulettes, Nuits St.George

Domaine du Clos des Poulettes is a very old estate, belonging to a family whose presence in Burgundy has been documented since the time of Louis XIV. Centuries-old experience and constantly renewed know-how have been applied to keep the Domaine at the forefront of quality in producing wine that best showcases the famous region and have become renowned for their ageing potential, regularly winning numerous awards in France and abroad.

Loire

A long river with an expanse of vineyards covering much of it, this area provides every style of wine imaginable. The cooler climate here ensures crisp clean dry whites, but also great sweet wines, reds and even sparkling wines of great character. We offer just a small selection, but these are all excellent hand-crafted examples.

Domaine Bonnard

A family vineyard of 13 hectares located in the heart of the Sancerre region, Domaine Bonnard have been producing wine for more than half a century, with the founders of the estate, Bernard and Pierrette, still working on their estate. The family affair continues with their two daughters, Marine (Viticulture) and Claire (Winemaker) playing a vital role in showcasing Sauvignon Blanc in its homeland.

Languedoc & Provence

Mas de Daumas Gassac, Aniane

Famously regarded as the 'First Growth of the Languedoc' and compared to the pretigious Château Lafite, Mas de Daumas Gassac are the very best in the Languedoc. Established in 1971, releasing their first vintage in 1978, Gassac became known across the world. In the early 1990's, the Guibert family set themselves a new challenge: the creation of Moulin de Gassac with Mas de Daumas Gassac's hallmark and Guibert' signature.

One of the finest regions of the World for red wines, but don't forget the white wines. The prices for the great wines of the Médoc continue to go through the roof, but the more everyday wines actually offer great value.

Spain

The third largest producer of wines, famed for Rioja, Sherry and Cava, but many other areas are producing really interesting wines. The Albarino grape grown on the Atlantic coast of Galicia is something very special and unique. High in the hills of Ribero del Duero the reds produced there have a totally different character than Rioja even though they use the same grape (they just call it by a different name).

Legado Muñoz

Founded in 1940, the Muñoz family have been making wine for six generations. Located in the town of Noblejas, south of Madrid, Legado Muñoz have established themselves as an important producer in the La Mancha region, with Bienvenido Muñoz awarded winemaker of the year in 2004. The conditions the region has to offer, such as low rainfall, old vines, and shallow soils, results in fantastically concentrated and extraordinary aromatic wines that always impress.

Vineyards in the Dão Region, Portugal

South Africa

This is a country with the potential to produce great wines. They seem to have most of the key ingredients; climate, soils, terroir, experience and cuisine. Maybe it just takes a bit of time now, a bit more age on the vines, a bit more experience, and a bit more export activity. It is certainly a country I like very much, and I am a great admirer of their wines, always looking to further expand our range. We would like to think of this area as being a specialism of ours.

Vilafonté

A vineyard different by design, with ancient soils, the iconic Vilafonté is the coming together of the very best from California and South Africa - Mike Ratcliffe, Dr Zelma Long, and Dr Phil Freese. The vision is one of an uncompromising determination to produce wines which stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the great wines of the world. Nothing less.

Very expensive real estate which does tend to trickle down into the wine prices a little. Good wines though.

Ports

Churchill's

Johnny Graham founded Churchill's in 1981, when he was just 29 years old, to make his own personal style of wine, blending tradition with a fresh take on Port and Douro wine. Churchill's has its roots deeply imbedded into quality Port history. As a result, their wine retains the best of their tradition in the slow, human-centred winemaking at the heart of the estate. The finesse and elegance of Grahams, the dryness and acidity of Cockburns and the structure and balance of Taylor's.
